Good Housekeeping Reports AquaGuard One of the Best Pool Alarms

AquaGuard Passes Rigorous Good Housekeeping Pool Alarm Test

IRVINE, CALIF. – June 16, 2008 – Swimming Pool Alarm Systems manufacturer, RJE Technologies, announced today that their AquaGuard product is one of only five pool alarms to be approved by Good Housekeeping magazine's recent pool alarm quality test. The magazine noted that AquaGuard was the only product that provided for a PIN access to disarm the system, providing an additional level of security. In addition to the PIN access, Aquaguard has full status indicators, alerting the pool owner when the system is armed, disarmed, or has a low battery. The sleek design makes it an attractive safety measure around the pool. Details about AquaGuard can be found at <http://aquaguard-pool-alarm.com/aquaguard.php>

Approximately 300 children under the age of five, drown each year in the U.S., according to CPSC. In most cases, an adult was supervising the child, and was distracted or didn't see (or hear) the child fall in the water. This is why ASTM certified pool alarms have gained popularity with owners of public and private swimming pools. Additionally, state and city governments have addressed improved pool safety by passing legislation involving the installation of an ASTM pool alarm as well as other new requirements.
